Project Manager

About the role

Global Traceability (GTS) is looking to hire a project manager who excels in customer relationships, to complement our team of remote-working colleagues working across Europe, North America and Asia.

A little bit about us

Founded in 2010, we have a vision of delivering smarter sustainable supply chains. We have over fifteen years of experience in implementing industry networks and traceability solutions. Our online application RADIX Tree, has been specifically developed for connecting and sharing data with the supply chain. Our tools give visibility over the raw materials that make up products and enable efficient due diligence to comply with regulation, such as the EUTR (EU Timber Regulation).

What will you be doing

You will work closely with the GTS management team to develop and execute our service and products in accordance with GTS policies, procedures, methodologies, regulatory requirements and standards.

Using your judgement to clarify, classify and identify project requirements and establish any gap analysis against GTS service or product.

You will provide input, assistance, and experience in the delivery of all projects. This will include communicating and discussing findings, progress, issues and risks with both internal and external sponsors including any follow-up activities.

You will be interacting with staff at all levels as well as acting on behalf of our clients to ensure the necessary information and qualification has been obtained, documented, confirmed and delivered.

You will be monitoring project progress (against timelines and goals) and manage to completion, escalating if or when required in a timely manner.

You will work closely with clients to support the implementation of product and service using GTS approved applications and processes.

You will conduct research, remain actively informed on news and development in our areas of expertise, perform internal/external training and occasionally be assigned special projects to complete

What you will need:

- Qualification(s) at a university level
- Fluent language proficiency in English. Other language skills are a bonus.
- Strong analytical skills
- Strong and proactive communication and time management skills
- Project and product management experience are a bonus
- Proven record working remotely is an advantage

What we are looking for:

We are a community of forward-thinking people, an agile bunch, and we seek other open minded, flexible people to join our team. We want you to have autonomy and ownership for the work you do.

Qualifications, experiences and personality are more important to us than your actual work location, which could be in Europe, North America or Asia with preference.

We want to see a passion for traceability & sustainability and how that can have a substantial impact on the world in which we live to improve sustainable world resources for future generations.

GTS delivers a compelling product and services model to enable smarter sustainable supply chains and provide governance frameworks to validate supply standards, so a professional alignment and similar drive would fit within our culture.

Benefits we offer

You will be encouraged and supported by our management team to provide the best customer experience possible.

We empower our people to deliver their work that support the company's global statements.

You will enjoy comprehensive and flexible remote working options.

You will work in a team of motivated people sharing the same ambition to support sustainability